Ottomans Received a Great Share of The Hostility and Anti-Islam Sentiments of The European Kings

The Christian leaders, amongst them priests, monks and kings, filled the European streets with hatred and grudges against Islam and Muslims, and the Christian clergy mobilized funds and volunteers to attack Muslims. The more the Ottomans defeated these crowds, the greater the wave of hatred and hatred for Islam and its people. So, the Christian leaders falsely accused the Ottomans of piracy and brutality, and these false accusations remained in the memories the Europeans.

The attacks that were carried out by the Christian leaders in public was so that they could safeguard their political and material gains, maintain their hatred for Islam and its people, and in effect some of the ruling families in Europe were able to dominate European societies for a long period of time, amassed huge wealth, greatly enriched themselves, established a great aura around themselves, and in most cases persisted upon this path through misguidance and misleading others.

Although European societies revolted against these groups after discovering their perversion and misguidance with the beginning of the Renaissance and the beginning of a new stage in European history, (Ref 1) however the conscience of European society could not get rid of the sediments inherited from these groups towards the Islamic world in general and towards the Ottoman Empire in particular. So, because of this - with their military forces and backed by its material civilization, they rushed to take revenge against Islam and the Muslims, and took away their good possessions in the name of religious, economic, political and cultural motives. (Ref 2) And their writers and historians supported them to insult and distort Islam, propagate doubts about Islam, its creed and history. The Ottoman Empire received a great share of this fierce attack. [An Excerpt from 'Ad-Dawlah Al-Uthmaaniyyah Awaamil An-Nuhood Wa Asbaab As-Suqoot'. Vol 6. pages 14-15. slightly paraphrased]

Finally, the Muslim's path to revival and strength is neither based on the satanic methodology of the Khawaarij [ISIS and their ilk] nor the corrupt ideas of Ed Husain and his ilk, rather the only path to rectification is the Qur'aan, the authentic Sunnah and understanding of the Sahaabah. And we live peacefully with our non-Muslim neighbours - neither being treacherous nor diluting the commands of Allaah and the Messenger [peace and blessings of Allaah be upon him].
